Intimate Concert Series

Saturday 29 November, 7pm

Scott Beck

Scott Beck learned to play by emulating the folk artists of the early 60's and 70's. He began writing songs for cover rock bands in the 70's, but noticed a shift in his material when he went back to the acoustic guitar in early 2000. Songs with wonderful story lines or spiritual messages presented themselves, and he learned to let go of the urge to control the direction of the song and allow it to reveal itself. As he worked his craft, Scott developed a talent for tapping into the "soul essence" of a song, bringing it through his heart in a way that allows so many of his fans to resonate with it.

His first CD, "Between Heaven and Earth," offers a look at the changes Scott has witnessed in his lifetime and is introspective, taking the listener back to a time when life was simpler and slower paced, encouraging them to consider what is really important.

Scott's second release, "I've Seen the Light," is joy-filled and inspirational, filled with positive themes that empower the listener. Eight of the songs are in the key of "F," the tone of the heart chakra. As a former massage therapist who also worked with vibrational sound, Scott realized during production that these songs could aid in the opening of his listener's hearts to facilitate their personal healing journeys.

His newest CD, "Singing You Home," consists of his folksongs, fairytales and other musings, and is more reflective of a live performance.

A modern-day troubadour, Scott writes and performs songs that truly connect with the audience on a heart and soul level, and is reminiscent of the legendary songwriters of the 60's and 70's.
